Build an exhibition or display to show and explain to others thereÃ² you were hoping to test (if you had a hypothesis) or what question you wanted to answer, what you did, what your data is, and your conclusions. Skip Navigation Do you need help to get started with your science fiction project? Your final report will include these sections: Title page. Some science fairs want to discuss what further research you might want to do based on what you've learned. NASA | Caltech | Privacy | Image policy | FAQ | Site Manager Feedback: Kim Orr Webmaster: Luis ESPINOZA Some scientific projects are experiments to test a hypothesis. Your final report will be several pages long, but don't be overwhelmed! Most sections of the Ã¨ consisting of information you already have written. Save your document often! You don't want to work hard getting something written the perfect way, just to crash your computer and lost information. Collect information for each section and type it into a word processor if you don't already have it done. First, choose an argument. Friends science staff added references and reformatted the bibliography later; As a result, the page and volume references are fictitious for some sources. Data analysis and discussion. At this point, you're on the way home. List of materials. Ideas for future research. Each test must be repeated in exactly the same way. Be sure to include the question you are trying to answer (your hypothesis), the steps you have taken to answer this question, your results, and any factors that may have affected your results. You want to look for trends in your results and draw conclusions from those trends. Practice that describes your project and results, then you will be ready for visitors to your exhibition Fair of science. Abstract. So do a background search on the topic.
